All in the game for Dimplex

Dimplex has stepped in to help social housing maintenance provider Connaught with a special community challenge to refurbish Ashton Vale Club for Young People in Bristol.

The club, in the centre of Ashton Vale housing estate, has a membership of more than two hundred 13-19 years olds and had raised money to replace the roof but needed extra help to complete the refurbishment project.

As Dimplex products are frequently used by Connaught in social housing properties, the market leader was naturally the first port of call and Dimplex donated the essential heating requirements of five PLX panel heaters which have been used in the main games room.

Teams of Connaught employees renovated the building over eight months, with support from partners such as Dimplex, as part of the company's affiliation with Business in the Community and Young Bristol, a voluntary youth organisation.

Young Bristol's club manager Lee Williams comments: "We just want to say a massive 'thank you' for all the hard work and commitment shown and of course to Dimplex and the other sponsors without whom it would not have been possible. This is a true community challenge that is having a really positive effect on the community now and for the years to come."

The ultra slim PLX panel heater range is popular with specifiers and contractors because it is not only efficient and controllable, but also space saving and stylish. They are often used to heat areas and rooms that only require heating for short periods of the day such as a bedroom, bathroom or kitchen, plus they also offer a cost effective way to extend an existing heating system when a building is being refurbished or extended, such as the Ashton Vale Club project.

All models in the PLX range have a high accuracy adjustable thermostat which responds to very small changes in room temperature and some models have a programmable 24-hour timer.

Connaught's community challenges are part of its Academy leadership development programme. Combining training and development of staff with its commitment to benefiting the communities in which it works, Ashton Vale is the first of many Connaught community challenges to be completed across the UK
